HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE OF COLORADO,

DENVER, May 11, 1878.

The republican state central committee of Colorado will meet at their room in Denver on Wednesday, June 12, 1878.

It is expected that the members of the committee will be prepared to present at that time complete reports as to the condition and organization of the party in their respective counties.

An invitation is hereby extended to all members of the party throughout the state to meet with the committee for a general exchange of views. It is important that all portion of the state be represented, that their interests may be fully understood and arrangements made for the prosecution of a vigorous and successful campaign.

W. H. PINE, chairman.

W. T. Clark, secretary.

Mary Clemmer Acheson says that "Hayes is a clean, obstinate, self-satisfied man, who believes thoroughly in himself, in his 'luck,' in the Lord, and in his wife. In the conduct of his life he is invariably directed by the four, chiefly by the first and last."

The Memphis Avalanche (Dem) like a good many other southern papers, has sound views on the present situation. It says, "The high destiny of the democratic party is to end in nothing for the balance of the year 1878. It is likely to wind up in the Devil's Evelyn."

The Atlanta Constitution does not shrink at wine to exempt to our Hayes, and says "The southern democrats have reason to many respects to adjudge his administration of public affairs, and do not desire to see the country plunged into the confusion that would result from such a move."

"All soft words instilling in the minds of the people of this country the idea that Hayes can be peacefully unseated by congress are as delusive and as guileful as the whisperings of the great arch fiend in the shape of a toad in the ear of Eve, from which sprung all our woes." Alexander H. Stephens.

There is some fear now that President Hayes will not quietly submit to the proposed revolution. It is now believed that the strong language which George Alfred Townsend reported him to have used, expresses his sentiments. The words "I shall defend my office and the independence of the executive against any intruder, have filled the Gramercy park clique with alarm. They did not look for resistance from Hayes."

After consultation with Secretary Sherman and other members of the Cabinet, the President thought it best to sign the Fort bill, which prohibits further contraction of the currency. The bill is not very friendly to the Resumption act, but contains the minimum amount of harm and foolishness which any bill from the present Congress could contain. President Hayes thought it best to sign this bill to avoid the passage of worse ones. Messrs. Ewing & Co. must feel badly over the financial legislation of the present session. With all their noise they have been unable to accomplish their ends or even to prevent resumption. Meanwhile we are looking in vain for those commercial revisions which were predicted in case the resumption act remained in force.

An interesting experiment is now being tried at the Hampton Negro Institute. Last April fifteen Indians, from twenty to twenty-six years of age, were placed in the institute. They are regular braves and are a part of the company of seventy-five Arapahoes, Cheyennes and Kiowas who were sent as prisoners to Fort Marion a short time ago. They arrived at the school in their savage costume, and at first were very sullen. The kindness of their teachers has won their hearts. A visitor says it is a scene "worthy of a painter to behold their dusky faces lit up with newly kindled fires of thought and feeling. It is said that soaring eagle soars on peninsula but makes it up on mountains they are particularly prompt in giving the Myers in Texas, and learned without difficulty that horses are one of the chief productions of the state, a fact which they probably became acquainted with in sundry raids heretofore. Should this experiment be successful, it will do much to aid in settling the Indian question. We understand that arrangements will be made to have both sexes at the institute, so that the experiment may be more fully tried.

No man need hope that the schemes of the men who have engineered the movement to unseat President Hayes can be carried on without a bloody civil war.

Judge Key.

The Cincinnati Enquirer (Dem) says, "There is about as much necessity for a congressional investigation of the Louisiana and Florida frauds as there is for an investigation of the marital relations of George Washington and the Widow Curtiss."

THE ACT TED ASSASSINATION.

The Emperor of Germany is reported to be improving. It seems that he was struck by about twenty shot. Notwithstanding that he is in his eighty-second year, he is in a splendid physical condition. Probably no man living has had more attempts made upon his life than Emperor William. Not to speak of the many recent efforts, an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate him was made June 12, 1849, while he was on his way to take command of the Prussian army. Another notable attempt was made upon his life in July, 1861, a few months after he ascended the throne, by Oskar Becker, a German student. Why so many efforts should be made to put an end to the life of the Emperor we cannot understand. He has led an extremely sober life and has served his country faithfully. He has manifested all the virtues with but few of the faults of the princely house of Hohenzollern. The natural kindness of the emperor's heart and the affection of the people for their ruler is seen in the following address of the emperor to the imperial chancellor, made directly after his attempted assassination by Hoedel a few weeks ago:

"The deed of a man led astray, who has apparently aimed at my life, so long regarded by the kind providence of God, has led to my receiving numerous professions of loyalty and affection in a form which has deeply affected and sincerely gratified me. Not only from every part of Germany have they come, but also in great numbers from abroad, from authorities, corporations, societies, and private persons of all classes and of all ages. It has thus been proved to me again that the heart of the nation is with its emperor and king. That my experience with him the same feeling, whether of joy or sorrow, I have seen in every eye which has met mine since this occurrence; and I have, indeed, been deeply and warmly affected by the dignified and orderly manner in which the population of Berlin have shown their sympathy. I feel that every eye who has exhibited to me this sympathy may know that thereby he has done me good. And I order you for this purpose to publish the foregoing."

IRAT BIRMINGHAM.

James F. Anderson is rapidly acquiring a reputation which will make him rank in history by the side of Munchausen.

He admitted Tuesday that he had perjured himself; that he had signed papers which were not true. How the democrats can make any effective use of his testimony we are unable to see. Anderson reminds us of Moulton in the Beecher trial. Judge Porter had referred to several occasions on which Mr. Moulton had declared in the most solemn manner that Mr. Beecher was innocent, and Mr. Moulton admitted that he had not told the truth. Then Judge Porter, with that terribly sarcastic manner which is particularly his own, said, "You lied, did you?" "Yes, says Moulton. "We have your word for it," says Judge Porter. The democrats have Mr. Anderson's word for it, but what does it amount to? The following letter was written only three weeks ago. It seems to conflict with his present testimony.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 14, 1878

DEAR SIR. The statement in the preamble to the resolution providing for an inquiry into the election of Louisiana, presented in the house by you yesterday, that James L. Anderson, supervisor of registrations of East Feliciana, "falsely protested that the election in the precincts in that parish had not been fair and free, is, in point of fact, not true. I am the person who made the returns of the election for presidential electors in 1876 from East Feliciana. Those returns, and all papers connected therewith made and executed by me are true, and strictly in accordance with the facts in the case. This I am abundantly able to show before any impartial tribunal empowered to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers.

JAMES E. ANDERSON.

If the democratic committee should attempt to use the testimony of Anderson, the republicans can easily find the testimony to impeach him by examining the records of David Dudley Field's committee. This committee worked very industriously and found out a great many reasons for not placing any reliance in Anderson when he was before the senate committee, democratic organs telegraphed all over the country the famous extract from the letter of General Sheridan, "I would not believe him under oath."

One good reason for believing that Anderson did not make any corrupt bargain with Sherman is that the republicans have not tried to hush him up. Anderson said to an interviewer the other day, "why did not they (the republicans) remember me when I needed help?" Now I am independent of them. This seems to intu me that Anderson is sore because he did not get office, and now is trying to have some revenge. The republicans do not seem to be disturbed by the prospective revelations. Meanwhile the republicans are preparing to bring out some interesting facts in regard to the way Tilden's agents used money in the south.

As Diana. Walk about.

The Denver Tribune has the following account of a strange phenomenon which was observed in that vicinity on Tuesday:

Persons who chanced to be in the open air yesterday about 12 o'clock, and who were looking toward the west, had their attention attracted to a very peculiar phenomenon in the clouds, or rather between the clouds and the earth, in the direction and apparently in the vicinity of Morrison, ten miles southwest of this place. To an observer a portion of the clouds seemed to become almost solid and hung down like a great pouch or bag. There is no doubt that what they saw was a waterspout, as yesterday's phenomenon answers all descriptions of water-spouts. The spout came to a point apparently twelve or fifteen feet from the earth, and it swayed about like an immense pendulum dangling in the air. It was visible for about ten minutes and gradually disappeared, apparently being sucked up into the clouds.

Various rumors reached Denver later in the day in regard to the damage done by the spout. Traced to their source, the greatest damage seems to have fallen upon the vicinity of Littleton, where about five miles square of country was devastated.

Large quantities fell also. Fences were broken over and the country flooded.

A large area of winter wheat was destroyed, but the details of any appreciable loss could not be ascertained.

The track of the Platte canon branch of the Denver and South Park railroad was inundated in places. The bridge over Dutch Creek was either partially or entirely carried away, so much at any rate that the train from below was unable to reach Denver, and no mails were received from off the line last night. An engine and crew from the Denver & Rio Grande railroad were sent from Denver last night to reconstruct the line.

The people at the water works and the city officers were somewhat exercised over the fear that a heavy rise in the Platte might ensue from the spout and the storm along the course. The stream did rise about dark a foot or two, but at midnight the stream had retreated and there was no indication of any further increase in its proportions.

It is a fact worthy of mention though the two circumstances may have no connection whatever that at the time the water-spout made its appearance the air was quite chill and cold, so great as to be very perceptible. Thick coats were very comfortable, quite desirable indeed, in the middle of the day.

The gross earnings of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway Company for the week ending May 31 were $27,218.42.

The earnings for the corresponding week last year were $19,271.83.

The gross earnings for the month of May were $86,958.77.

The earnings for the month of May, 1877, were $65,435.54.

This shows that the business of the company is rapidly growing. When the tourists are here and the San Juan trade is well opened these amounts will be largely increased.

It is an open question as to how long a snake can live without food. A cupboard was torn away at the billiard hall at Manitou yesterday, and in an unused enclosure in the bottom of the cupboard a bull snake, four feet in length and six inches in circumference, was found. This enclosure had been nailed fast for three years. The only aperture was a small hole in a corner about one-fourth of an inch in diameter. The snake must have entered the cupboard when very small or had been confined there for the space of three years with nothing to eat except what went through this small opening.

The poor snake was put to death after his long fast without giving him a square meal.
